Following fourteen years running his own law firm serving the legal needs of clients across Passaic, Bergen, Morris, Middlesex, Essex and other counties, Steven H. Wolff joined Einhorn, Barbarito, Frost, Botwinick, Nunn & Musmanno, PC, as a partner. He values professionalism and a personalized approach to legal counsel and is committed to upholding the highest standards of legal practice, ensuring that each client benefits from an unwavering dedication to their case.

With significant experience as a litigator across several practice areas, Steven represents individuals facing complex family-related legal challenges, meticulously managing every facet of the legal process, from initial consultations through to document preparation, negotiation, mediation, litigation, and the execution of necessary administrative tasks. He provides counsel to clients about divorce, property distribution, custody and support, and advises on legal rights and options for domestic violence victims including protective orders. He empathizes with the sentiments clients may feel during these challenging chapter of their lives.

As an extension of his work with families, he is involved in estate litigation, representing clients who are seeking to challenge wills as well as persons who are defending against such challenges. In the area of real estate law, Steven advises on matters involving commercial landlord-tenant disputes and handles actions arising from sales and leasing contracts for buying or selling property. Additionally, Steven has handled negotiations and trials in both contract breaches and personal injury matters.
